

ADVICE OFFERED ON CHRISTMAS PROJECTS

With Christmas little more than a month away, the First District Welfare Center in Torrance is setting up shop as a Santa Claus counseling service for clubs and organizations who want advice on how best to bring yuletide cheer to needy persons of the community.

Model Queen

Curveson Jean Olson, Torrance model, is one of the 100 models seeking the title of "Model of the Year." To be chosen at the annual Artistic Model and Photographers Ball at the Hollywood Athletic Club, Nov. 21.

Select List Of Jobs Open, Says CSES Manager

In an interview with Mrs. Winona Ellis, manager of the Torrance office of the California State Employment Service it was learned that the present time there are various employment opportunities available for both men and women. Mrs. Ellis stated that there is a need for stenographers, clerk-typists and general office workers.

There are 500 openings for policemen and 500 openings for policewomen with the City of Los Angeles. The examination for these openings will be held in January, with the last date for filing Dec. 30. Anyone interested in securing this type of employment is urged to contact the local employment office for further information regarding physical and educational requirements, etc.

There is a current need for a structural engineer with a college degree, experience or similar experience in the designing and drafting of portable steel oil derricks, radio towers, truck chassis, and some mechanical experience.

There is still a need for skilled workers of all types. There are also jobs available for semi-skilled and unskilled workers.

Mrs. Ellis stated that veterans attending school and who wish to work during their Christmas holiday should contact the Torrance office of the California State Employment Service as they have a number of jobs which will begin around the end of November and continue thru the Christmas holiday.

Any group or individual planning Christmas projects may call Mrs. Louise Cook, manager of the Welfare Center for this area, at 1366, or visit her office at 1339 Post ave. for suggestions.

On file at the Center are lists of social-welfare agencies which are asking for contributions of certain types. For example, a community organization which wants to donate books as Christmas gifts could consult the file as to what agency will distribute books to underprivileged persons.

Donors are encouraged to give families the pleasure of choosing their own Christmas treats, by giving checks or merchandise orders from stores. However, desirable gifts listed at the Center include the following:

Books, men's and women's clothing, children's clothing, athletic equipment, personal gifts for men and women, campships, games for families; gifts suitable for hospital and institution confines; handcraft materials, hobby equipment, magazine subscriptions, candy, children's toys, tickets to concerts and lectures, tools, and articles of permanent value such as bedding and glasses.

Mrs. Cook suggests that the community remember elderly persons at Christmas as well as children. "Books, tickets to cultural events, and potted plants are a few of the articles which agencies will deliver to elderly and perhaps lonely men and women who otherwise would be forgotten at Christmas," she commented.

Although names of needy families are not accepted by the Welfare Center, Protestant families may be registered with the Salvation Army in Los Angeles, telephone TE 35227, and Catholic families with the Rev. Patrick McGuinness at the Church of the Nativity in Torrance or the Rev. Cyril Wood at Our Lady of Guadalupe church in the Pueblo district.

To avoid duplication and insure a more even distribution of gifts, individuals or groups planning to give to needy families are asked to register names of the families at the Welfare Center, which will act as a Christmas Clearing Bureau through the Welfare Council of Metropolitan Los Angeles.

New Expectant Mothers' Course Starts Dec. 3

Following completion of the recent course for expectant mothers at the Torrance health center, a new series will be started on Wednesday, Dec. 3 at 1:30 p.m., with Mrs. Mary Ulmer, public health nurse, as instructor.

All the subjects covered in these classes will be the purpose of prenatal care and physical examination, nutrition, mothers' and babies' clothes, and supplies. Demonstrations of formula preparation and baby's bath are also scheduled.

All prospective mothers as well as those who might have the care of new babies are invited to avail themselves of this education service of the Los Angeles county health department.

Women who attended all 12 of the classes in the last series have been awarded certificates of attendance, and those who missed certain sessions may make up these subjects in the new course in order to receive "diplomas."
